Not yet a member? Although it is a fairly old game, it has gained a whole new following in the last few years, but the developers are definitely trying to make more out of it. They have plans to add an online mode to the game that would allow online gaming through the game's servers, and also add new gameplay. Gameplay This game has a broad scope, so your character can play the game in any kind of circumstance. You are placed into the game as an amnesiac teenager, and are made to collect information from various places. You find out about the world around you, and in turn, it affects other things in the game. Your actions have consequences, and they affect the future of the game, which you have to think about when you make a decision. The game has a multiplayer mode, which is online and requires players to be connected to a server, and can be played either with others on the server, or with opponents via their unique avatars. The game offers players a few modes of multiplayer, and each mode sets up the game in a unique way, giving it a different atmosphere and experience. Players can play the single player campaign online and locally, against opponents, or across different maps that all offer different experiences. There are a lot of different maps that can be selected, which is an advantage for players as they can choose the game mode they like, and also the game can be played in co-op or competitive modes. The game comes with a lot of different game modes, from survival horror mode to a more casual co-op mode. Ask HN: Staying in the US in the current climate - ArmandGrillet I'm a Canadian citizen and I have residency in the US. I'm worried, because I'm seeing that many postings on HN are considering the possibility of leaving the US soon. It's not that I'm hoping not to go back to the US, but many startups from the US are starting their companies in other parts of the world, because of the complexity of the US bureaucracy, and because they don't trust that they will be protected if some data are leaked. The latter is a problem because the US has one of the highest rates of cybercrime. How do you avoid not being in that situation? ===== eclectic My company relocated to the UK. As a US citizen you are treated just like any other worker regardless of your citizenship. ~~ 3e33713323
