Find what: One or more words of your choice, delimited by commas. Replace with: One or more words of your choice, delimited by commas. This macro will work with both.doc and.rtf files. And it will save your search and replace information as a.csv file, that is, you will have a.csv file which contains search and replace information for each record, one on each line. In addition, you can choose to save the result in a.txt file, instead of a.csv. This is only available with.doc files. The ability to save the result in a.txt file and not a.csv gives you the option to edit the saved data and publish the results in other documents. When you need to search in an entire directory tree, use 'wild card' and save your.csv file. You may use any combination of the following characters: a=A =Any Character ?=Any Character but not a wildcard character E=Any Character not a wildcard character, but must begin with an E. Enter=Any Character not a wildcard character, but must begin with an Enter You can define your own keywords with the 'MyKeywords' field in the 'MyParameters' dialog. The text between 'Begin Keyword' and 'End Keyword' must be a valid expression in your language. Use 'Delete all characters after '' for to perform a quick and simple search for specific text. You can change the text in the text area at the bottom with your own search keywords. Be warned that the current search does not check for text with white space, so if the text area is initially empty, you will see the word 'All' in the text area. You must use your own Wild Card (*) for a complete search in the directory tree, because the wild card here is not a wild card for expressions, but just a wild card. You must add the '.csv' at the end of the 'File Name' field. You must use the 'Start search from' option for this search in an entire tree. You can add a new search by pressing the 'Add Search' button. You can delete a search by pressing the 'Delete Search' button. The 'Start search from' option is only available with.doc files. You can use the 'Edit search' button to edit the search.

Word Search and Replace is a macro for Microsoft Word. It was purposely created for users who need a quick and simple method to search and replace words. So if you have a large Word document and you need to find a relatively small piece for information, either for replacing or just for information identification. It doesn't use our Funduc's Search and Replace product, so the available functions are the same as those in the Word 'Find and Replace' dialog. Word Search and Replace can process more than one file by specifying a 'wild card' in the dialog's 'File Mask' field. Please note that the name of the actual.doc within the zips below may be different, depending on the version. There are only one.doc per zipping. To run the macro simply open the.doc. If you need extra information about the macro's functionality, Close 'WordSR.doc' at first startup and read the text in the document. The tool can only process files read by your MS Word. The.doc and.rtf files are read by default. Whether you can handle any other file types depends on the conversion features installed for your Word &/or Microsoft Office. In addition to the traditional coating methods such as flame or flame spraying, by dipping or by screen printing, cathodic sputtering has become a useful coating method. Since a large number of glass substrates, for example, window panes or picture windows, are glass covered in glass factories, it is an important object to provide a coating process which can be carried out economically and rapidly and the coating layer can be deposited on a glass substrate of any shape, such as, for example, a window pane, a picture window, a jewelry case, a light cabinet or a safety glass pane. It is a further object to provide a coating process which produces a uniform coating layer of the thickness of less than 1,000 nm (angstrom). Transcript for Katie Roberts and Ilan Ben Zion Okay let's talk a little bit about. That first reaction that you had when you knew the president of the United

It felt like in a lot of ways it felt like we had never been more close friends and yet we were having a crisis in the relationship. Yeah my first reaction is that he felt like he came out from the field from the first hour of the game. That we played together. And I know you have heard of many teams not going out to the field as a last minute. Crisis and for a lot of teams that's the case. But it was not and that you felt that he decided to step away to go back home. And it felt like his home base was the White House. And it felt like a very last minute decision. In a lot of ways it was very shocking. Because I had grown very close to him I was so nervous. To have no access to him and talk to him as the rest of the players. Got through it because it was so busy with so many other things. We had a curfew. That we were all restricted from talking to him. We couldn't go home and even to get a message that he wanted to chat. And it was like in a lot of ways we couldn't communicate to tell you the truth. That was one of the worst experiences we've ever had. And I will never forget it for
