The application can be configured to automatically run when your computer starts up, and is available for all the main platforms. It's a good idea to turn off ads, even if you do not surf from another machine. Some users have had complaints about TunnleBear's interface being more complex than what was advertised. However, the settings you need to set up are all easily accessible once you have created your account. The application is free, and you will need to set up your own vpn account in order to use it. using a hotkey combination. You can choose which program you want to use to interact, which can be chosen from any of the currently running programs on your computer. On the PC side, you have the ability to view and manage any folders you may have on the device, such as downloads, photos, music, videos or documents. The program can also function as a Remote Desktop Server, allowing you to stream all current programs, settings, documents and folders back to the device. Personal Firewall

It is a network utility that checks your network connection to make sure it is safe to use. It shows you a graph of the network with uptime, failover, latency, speed and other great info. It is the easiest way to get this kind of information in one app. You can also get updates about your network and talk to other users. When you first set it up you need to set the IP address of your computers network card. This can be an IP address (this is probably the same as the IP on your computer) or a domain name, or if the computers are behind a router, the IP of the router. Then you need to set a username and password, this is the same thing on all computers on the network. Chapters can be set to show up as cards, and you can also select which windows you want to be shown, which means you can bring them up when you want them to, and they disappear when you close them (default is show all). The application also has a buddy list, which shows who you are connected to, or who is connected to you and all the data and history, and room list, which lists all the rooms on the network. Finally, you can use the built in automatic proxy configurator to set up your internet using proxies from all over the world, and the application will keep track of what proxy servers you have configured. Another cool feature, is the "Talk Now", which is the name of the application. When you click on it, the application will let you know who is currently logged on to your computer and online on your buddy list. You can also send messages to other users and see who is online when you click on the talk now button on chatrooms, and see the chats on the active chatrooms when you click chatrooms. When you are connected to the network, the application defaults to show all available rooms and the rooms you have logged in to, but you can choose what rooms you want to see by clicking on the "rooms" button. You can also set what rooms you want to be automatically added to when a new person logs into the network by clicking on the "who is online" button. If you want to chat, you can connect to rooms by clicking on the "Connect" button, or just start chatting by clicking "chat now". The application also has a built in map of all the rooms around the world, so you can see where you are logged in to when you click
