In FIFA 19, the game engine can use this data to animate a player's movements like a real-life footballer. With this new update, the game engine animates much faster compared to FIFA 19. So you will see the effects in the game much sooner than FIFA 19. Hovering over a player in the Squad gives you a readout showing their exact statistics, including mobility ratings. In addition, you now get an Optimized View option when viewing Players in the Top Stats screen You can also now personalize a squad with specific skill-sets by choosing which skill ratings you want to emphasize while developing a player. With your view of player statistics updated, the Squad screen also now offers team, competition and season rankings in addition to how you have set up your attributes. You can now view the team, competition and season rankings from the player game stats screen, to see where a player is personally ranked and compare against other players within the same squad. ← Another Highlight Feature You can now use the Flagstick to play freekicks. As you press the left or right stick, the most suitable wall in your vicinity is highlighted for the perfect cross, corner or freekick. When playing a freekick, the Flagstick also highlights walls and makes you aware of the direction and length of the pass you need to play. Don't miss the World Cup on 14th June, 2018 and use this feature to step up your freekick game with minimal effort Managing your tactics has become a lot easier now. You can access all your tactics from anywhere by moving the Scout Cursor to the tactics section and accessing any tactic with a click. We have also introduced a new option in the tactics screen so you can now change the army selection options for each team in-game Option - Army Selection Access the Tactics screen by pressing R2. Here you can choose various game modes to play in Solo mode, Co-op, Unranked or ranked. When you play a game with a random opponent, you will be faced with a host of scenarios that is not available in the other game modes. For example, the game
