"itunes universal audio converter will be released as free update and is available for both mac and pc. did you go on the alva, as i have been advised to by this fellow? he gave me some information (again, he's a lawyer, so some of the advise was a bit scattered) and he even pointed me to a couple of reputable experts. so i went and found out for myself if one business is better than the other. from what i've researched, they are exactly the same. here's an example. here's the thing. i wanted to run a small piece of equipment in my house for a month. a small stereo amp, which would probably get around 20w on the highest setting. i was interested in running a select few of my records, and mainly cds to see if the music sounded better. i had a friend who had a recording studio, and his cd player was going out. but, he gave me the chance to try it out. so, i figured i'd give it a shot. i used the 3+ year old outdated piece of equipment to look through the records i wanted. i also thought about having two or three amps (one being a 300w amp), and i figured that would add $50-$60 to the monthly expense. so, i bought a $95, one month subsonic record player, and put it in my house. i ordered a few stereo cd cases, because i figured there'd be a couple (or more) hours of listening, and i wanted to save wear and tear on the vinyl. i figured spending $10-$15 on a few cases would be worth it to me. the cases have no pictures on them, though, so i have no idea what they look like. all i know is that they have silver spines, and they fit the records i purchased. the record player didn't even have a cable that fit any phono cartridge, so i just had to buy a $20, two-prong to xlr converter. i actually had a few ($20-$35) turntables in my house. i had a $20 5-speed for some yard work i did. but, i sold those to a friend who wanted to learn. i had a $100, 5-speed, which was more than 30 years old and wasn't even scratched. but, i guess i'm not the intended user. now, to put this on the power, i bought a "keep" three step switch, which was $10. i figured this would help me with the volume a little bit. i used a $20, sound system remote with a $10, universal remote. i had tried to rent a sound system (which was not $100/month like this guy is charging) before and ended up renting an $800, 16-channel system. the guy that was in charge of it actually handed me back my $80. he said he knew i would go broke trying to figure it out, and that i should rent it for a couple of hours. he told me not to come back and rent it again because i would go broke. so, i decided to buy a $60, five-channel unit to learn how to hook it all up. now, the unit came with a free case, and i figured that was worth $20, in case the side of it was scratched. there are a couple of extras. but, i figured they would be worth $20. i bought a $10, philips speaker. one of my friends had a pair of $30, panasonic speakers in the front of his living room. i bought a $20, iron fireplace grate and installed it on the front door.
